Research Statement:

“Is it true that the way we were living before formation of United Nation was really wrong?”

Author: Annesha Kar Gupta

Issue: This question has no straight yes or no answer. It is true that Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) is failing in many countries whereas United Nations had a successful Millennium Development Goals (MDG) which inspired them to proceed for SDGs. UN knew that getting 100% success at SDGs like MDGs is difficult, but it was unimaginable that SDGs could fail in that way as the way it is failing nowadays.

Rule: There are three revolutions happen since 10000 BC which are as follows-

- Agriculture Revolution: Since 10000 BC to 1700 AD Monarchy and political class played a great influencing role at our society. Monarchy across the world except England, ruled the globe according to law of fact, whereas His Majesty King Henry-II introduced rule of law through English Common Law System and that separated England from other countries. England was a constitutionalist country whereas other countries were a mix of constitutionalist and theocratic systems. Even though political class superseded hereditary monarchy through right wing, it was never been able to supersede rule of law because the fundamental structure of England was constitutionalist system which means a system of law that create morality on the basis of natural law, ie interaction between air, fire, water, earth, and intuition.
- Industrial Revolution: Since 1700-2000 AD the raise of left wing through industrial revolution voiced for freedom through freedom from colonization, freedom from population control, and freedom from industrial control. This revolution superseded political class through plutocracy and to introduce pure democracy.

- Intelligence Revolution: Civilian class rules through artificial intelligence during this revolution. Legislation and election are no more ceremonial now. It gives pure power to people to voice their freedom and to prove that common people do not need rulers, but rulers need those most.

Application: United Nation formed with a noble intention during this period to bring freedom from plutocracy and introduction of pure democracy, but it is failing in SDGs for lack of intelligence Revolution. It was true that colonialism should be ended, but end of colonialism has two bad impacts on colonized countries which are as follows:

- Presupposition Theory of Kelsen: Kelsen said that colonial are standing there where rulers left them. To some extent this version is true because many people are living in colonial mentality or nostalgia crisis. They are living mentally at colonized period and passing that thinking down to their next generations who are maintaining that hangover strictly.
- Lack of Heroic Leaders: In British era, many heroic leaders saved colonized societies in many different ways. For example, British rulers gave right of audience at Parliament to Raja Ram Mohan Roy to legislate a law to ban on 'Sati-Pratha'. These heroic leaders played a huge role to voice those who fought for freedom from colonization.

However, now lack of heroic leaders caused lack of intelligence revolution in some countries. This gave raise of plutocracy and propaganda in some countries. This is frustrating the goal of SDGs.

MDGs were restricted to developed countries. Developed countries are accepted the revolution of intelligence strictly since 2000 AD onwards. Universities or other scholarly institutions do research work through its team and these research works become the basis or foundation of political policy framing. So in developed countries, civilians are in rule and that is the reason of hundred percent successes of MDGs of United Nations.

However, some theocratic developing and under-developed countries are still unable to accept the revolution of intelligence. People are still affected by colonial mentality or nostalgia and wealthy people are taking the benefit out of it. These countries where SDGs are failing still living under the industrial revolution concept or stage where rich people are making rules, not civilians as it does at developed countries.

Moreover, heroic leaders are not present in these theocratic developing and under-developed countries to make people understand the difference of ruling between before 2000 AD and after 2000 AD, ie rule of plutocracy and rule of civilians. This proves the words of kelsen's presupposition theory again.

So in light of the above discussion, we can say that freedom from colonization was required. United nation correctly said that the way we were living not the right way. Freedom from colonization was a step of upliftment from rule of rich to rule of civilian, but some countries failed to accept that privilege that developed countries accepted easily.

We needed freedom and United Nation, but we still are living in incorrect way of living. Every country needs to accept the revolution of intelligence and need to introduce it through its Universities or other scholarly educational institutions. They need to discuss their finding globally and these research works should be the basis for legislation of laws or policy framing for both public and political party policies.

The day every country will achieve this, then United Nation can proudly say that the way we lived our life until today was incorrect. Currently, UN cannot say this because our way of life is still incorrect even though we are free from foreign colonization.

It is the duty of UN to free territories from self-proclaimed colonization too. For example, in Cameroon we can see that an intra state war is going on. Article 12 of UN Charter says that UN has no power intervene between state's personal affair, but when a country is under modern war, then it is the fundamental duty of United Nation to intervene there because the constitution of UN says that it was formed to stop every kind of war, ie jus in bello and jus in ad bellum. Humanitarian laws are getting violated directly and/or indirectly everyday in Cameroon. So preamble or reason of fundamental formation plays its role over its Articles because Articles derive its power from Preamble or fundamental reason of foundation. No right is absolute, and so Article 12 also not absolute. When modern war means intra state war is violating rights of human being and humanitarian laws, then this is the duty of UN to play the role of heroic leaders, as Britain played, to escape these nations from this kind of ruling and help them to overcome from presupposition mental concept so that they can accept the new revolution of intelligence and that will lead the success of SDGs.

Conclusion: In conclusion we can say that this statement is partially true that the way we were living not correct, unless and until every nation shall be able to accept the rule of civilians means revolution of intelligence.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=C9TtI0pC3NI>

The quest of God is very hard to find. Being a very simple person and a family man I was wondering where God is? I am trying to find out God in everywhere. Who is God are completely my own thoughts. The person who do not have time to sit for meditation or yoga because I have to fight for my life survival, then where can I find God?

Somnath De, Informatic of this forum asks you:

How this war is affecting Sustainable Development Goals of United Nation?
